Education

Tampa General is affiliated with the USF Health Morsani College of Medicine and serves as the primary teaching hospital for the university. About 700 residents/fellows are assigned to Tampa General Hospital for specialty training in areas ranging from general internal medicine to neurosurgery. In addition, USF medical students, nurses and physical therapy students receive part of their training at Tampa General. Faculty from the USF Health Morsani College of Medicine admit and care for patients at Tampa General Hospital as do private practice physicians, many of whom also serve as adjunct clinical faculty. Tampa General also serves as a teaching hospital to students in many disciplines from several area schools.

Community Engagement

Tampa General Hospital supports the community it serves by providing programs to improve the health of its residents such as free health education programs and screenings throughout the year.
